

A Word from Jawn

June 1, 2020

Carol and I have two Daughters. They are two astonishing human beings.

Yes! I hear you! I am their Father and I am biased. But you also know . . . this is my job!

Both of these Women are powerful Mommas. They love, care, protect and nurture their families and brook no injustice or harm. Both are talented in their professions. Both dare to live in the midst of their human frailties with bright courage and wilful determination. They are naturally faithful. They commit themselves to their relationships.

More, each of my Daughters has a creative spirit, but it is expressed in different ways.

My Eldest is a people-person. She is an extrovert and derives her personal-energy through her work with other people and groups and organizations. She is a natural, visionary-leader. She can discern a need, create a team, and, not only bring the idea to fruition, but engender a positive, long term social-outcome for her community. This Woman dares to reach into new places of learning and dares to excel.

My Youngest is a problem-solver. She understands calculus. A classic 'introvert', she derives her power from quiet times, a warm quilt, a cozy couch, a good book and soft gentle hugs. This Woman reads philosophy and theology, along with a good dose of historical romance and is richer and deeper in her personhood as a result. And then, she can turn to her computer and design the curve for a multi-lane highway.

Who are these astonishing People? The Divine joke is on me! Our Creator seems to have used my frailty as a parent and turned these two wonderful People loose! Today's World will be saved by such as these!

In Jesus name, . . . Peace to you.
